American composer Frank Lynes (1858-1913) was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts. He studied at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston where he concentrated on piano, organ and music theory. He continued his education in Leipzig, Germany where his piano teacher was the renowned composer Carl Reinecke. He returned to Boston and became a prominent musician, devoting his life to teaching, composing and directing choirs. His passion for piano teaching is evident in the excellent works he wrote for students.

Alice's Adventures in Wonderland is a children's nonsense story first published in 1865 by English author Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, who is better known under his pen name Lewis Carroll. With the help of stage, film and television productions, the title became abbreviated as Alice in Wonderland. This timeless children's story is of a girl (Alice) who stumbles into a rabbit-hole and discovers a fantasy world full of peculiar creatures.

The cover features a detail from Claude Monet's The Luncheon, Monet's Garden at Argenteuil, painted in 1873.
